My First ^{-tary} Voluntary Activity

My first volunteer activity I remember is ^{that} ~~the one~~ which I went to old folks' home in An'Ning district. It was organized by a collegium of our university. I and some members took part in it. It was the third of July, 2009, before our summer holiday.

Our bus started off at two thirty. After thirty minutes, we reached the old folks' home. We were told to do three main things. The first thing was to help them do some cleaning and washing work. The second was to act out plays. The third was talking with these old people.

As had been told, firstly, we helped them do some cleaning and washing. Since they were two other members moping the desks and tidying the rooms, so I went to wash some sheets. These sheets were just a little dirty. From this, we could image that these old people were all like too keep clean. I washed every sheet carefully and patiently. I washed every sheet two times. Twenty minutes, I washed the sheet had given me. Then I hang them in the clothesline. Seeing these sheets shaking in the wind, I was full of joy had satisfactory.

When our cleaning and washing had been done, we began to put on performance to these old people. We sang some old songs to them, such as the red star shines and Farewell. Some of us danced to them. The most interesting part was to act out plays. We acted some plays of Zhao Baohan and Song Dandan, such as Yesterday, today, Tomorrow and white clouds and Black soil. During the playing, these old people laughed and laughed. Some of them were too happy to tear. They all praised us for excellent performance.

At last, it was the time for talking. I walked to an old man who was having tea under the tree.

"Hello! Grandfather, How are you?" I said.

"Hello! I'm fine. Sit here, please!" He said, pointing to the chair beside him.

"Thank you!" With the words, I sat down. "How are you going here, how about your living?"

"I live very well. The service people here are very kind to us. We eat well and have comfortable clothes to wear." Said the old man.

"Do you feel lonely here?" I asked.

"Of course, I often feel lonely. I also want to live with my family like other people. But my daughter-in-law don't want me to live with them. So my son had to send me here. I also miss my grandson." He answered.

"Oh, I know. You can ask them to see you sometimes." I said.

"Yes, they come to see me every three weeks. That was my happiest time. I can stay with my grandson for a whole afternoon." He said with smile.

"That's great. I hope one day your daughter-in-law will allow you to live with them." I said.

"I hope so. Thank you. Thank you for you and your collegium have done for us. We all very happy today." said the old man.

"We just have done what we should. We will come again if have another chance. I hope you have a good time every day. Goodbye." I said.

After saying goodbye to the old man, it's was time for our leave. Then we took on the bus and on our way to our University.

Comments:

The author described a volunteer activity in detail. And it also contained some parts of personal experience and some personal feelings. I love the dialogue with the old man particularly.

Marriage Without Money

As the pace of life continues to increase in the modern society, money has played an essential role that can't be replaced, even the true love are no longer saved as for money, further more, even marriage. The importance of money seems to be self-evident, but it isn't the unique factor of marriage.

The famous author Jane Austen's ~~is~~ Pride and Prejudice ~~is~~ properly deals with the relationship about money, love and marriage. First, Lydia and Wickham's marriage. Lydia's money plays an important role, as Wickham's status was the lower middle class, and no large property can be ~~inherit~~ inherited, thus he has a greedy desire for money. Finally, he chooses to marry Lydia. However, it is obvious that money is the biggest motivation of their marriage instead of true love. There is no doubt that their marriage will fail in the end. From this kind of marriage, we can see that a marriage only for money is a failure. ~~Second paragraph~~ Second, Charlotte and Collins's marriage, in order to stable the family economy, politic and social status, Charlotte has no choice but marry Collins, which is largely associated with money. Charlotte says that: "marriage is not only to meet psychological needs, but a combination of ~~private~~ ^{love} property that the family and the institutional strategies". Then this leads to their marriage is not only the end — result of ^{love} money, but controlled by money. ~~Third~~ Third, Elizabeth and Darcy, whose marriage is the most successful and happiest among the three. The combination of them is to based on true love, but unseparated from money. If they are not equal in material, or don't have enough money, they will not enjoy a happy life in the end. Through these several marriages, and revealed in Austen that money is a necessary aspect for marriage.

But whether the marriage is only measured by economic factors? Elizabeth and Darcy's marriage gives us the neg negative negative answer, money is important, "no money of marriage is stupid," but also explained that "the marriage without love is never." ^{without money} This fact can also be proved in our real life. We have to admit that a marriage without money just likes a building which has weak foundations, that can be easily destroyed once met heavily wind or rain. That's to say, even though we love each other very much, the ^{man} love we love is so poor that hardly supports our family, and then our marriage will become impractical.

In conclusion, marriage without money is impossible. But it is not the only factor that affects one's marriage. A marriage built on love and money may be a long-term choice.

Comment: I'm very glad to see this composition. Marriage can be existed without money? It really is a problem for everyone. You give us a good example about the Pride and Prejudice. I agree with your opinion. We need both love and money in marriage. You cite some words in novel. That's great. Maybe some sentences can be briefly.

Get Married without money?

I consider that I will marry to a poor man as long as he loves me. Marriage lies not in the mere possession of money, it lies in the joy of love; in the thrill of keeping company.

There's a short story to confirm my view. My aunt ever married to a rich man. However, it became a tragedy in the end: they divorced. Money didn't give them a hand. What caused their separation were the shortage of love and misunderstanding. Besides, they quarreled with each other so many times for how to spend money. Instead, if they didn't have much money, maybe they could make a difference.

In the movie "Titanic", between Jack and the rich man, Rose chose Jack. In other words, between true love and money, Rose chose true love. Jack had no money, but he loved Rose. If Jack didn't die, Rose would get married with him. When the Titanic was sinking, all the things, included money, were thrown into the sea. At that moment, money lost its original meaning and value, and it became a kind of heavy burden, just a useless thing. However, the only existed thing was true love. Love was the only thing which gave people limitless power to conquer all the sufferings, even the death.

Marriages have no direct relationship with money, but deeply related to the true love. Love along with the rough roads of marriage are like the little birds that sing to us all winter long and make the season of ice and snow more endurable. Therefore, instead of trying hard to get more money, try still harder to make your lover happy, that was the sole purpose of marriage. An advantage of money was that it helped us entertain our life, so it's just a ferrier part, or rather, a tool to get more materials to make our life better, and it was not the main factor to determine a marriage.

Love possesses an essence of immortality. It was the same today that always was, and it will never change. Temples and status decay, but love survives. "The supreme happiness of life is the conviction that we're loved", a famous saying goes. Money can't buy love, and also can't buy marriage. Love to the marriage is as necessary as food for the body. Nevertheless, money only plays an extra role in it. As a matter of fact, marriage without money, it will still continue, but if without love, it will be empty and meaningless.

True love is hard to find, harder to leave, and impossible to forget. Without money, I still will marry to him as long as he loves me, as long as true love exists.

Get Married without Money?

There is a ~~joke~~^{saying} "Marriage is the tomb of love", and people today like to take money as their "sacrificial object" when tying the knot. It is even challengable to put forward "Get married without money" now, especially for the future mother-in-law.

The famous TV show "If You Are the One", as far as it goes, unveils the typical conception of marriage of the young generation nowadays. Girls are no longer so much reserved, and they tend to make it clear that money plays a considerable important role in their longing marriage. To keep pace with girls, boys ~~are~~ usually like to show off their opulent ~~possession~~ possessions. It causes a controversy in our society. Some blame them as they aren't seem to pursue love-combination but money-combination. ~~In~~^{In} other words, marriage turns to be a tool to get what they ~~desire~~^{desire} rather than a holy match. While some others think it's reasonable for them to make their own choices. They are more practical, in their eye marriage is quite different from dating. Romance and passion will fade gradually in real life which is filled with all sorts of trifles. The guarantee of money makes people feel pragmatic. Money steads marriage. Beyond doubt the fact is most of the ^{modern} modern couples weigh money much in their matching. It may wrong to say they are marry for money, but it is right to say most of them are not only marry for love.

I have seen the love film "Under the Hawthorn Tree" the other day. It is billed as "the purest love story in history". The story happened in the mid-1970s. The lovers Jing qiu and Lao san express their love in a rather implicit way. It shows us that true love let a person live for his/her lover willingly, their fortunes are mingled together. We cherish such pure time. It also reminds me of my parents, both of whom were born in 1960s. Once I asked mum curiously how they got married. Mum told me father was very humble at that time, but she concered much of father's virtue and sense of responsibility. They had a pretty plain wedding, but they enjoy a lasting marriage. They ^{have been sharing} share happy and sorrow together, support each other in hardships. They run a harmonious family. Maybe our life is not that wealthy, but we enjoy it so much, happiness can not be judged by money. I love my parents, they tell me marriage is built by love and trust. Money is necessary, but it never ^{can} be the key word ^{to} life.

The Party That Never Ended

"Tick, tick, tick..." the pendulum clock stood still at the east corner of the house was string the silence to remind the whole family the passage of time. Alice had ^{been} lost consciousness for almost 24 hours. But something special seemed was still irrigating life to this dying flower.

Let's flash our focus back on a strong dream Alice ^{had} had last night: a beautiful angel guided her to a golden palace where girls at her age came from the whole country to celebrate their being ^{adults} adult. The party was interesting to a degree that nothing she experienced could surpass. She had been looked for such a party for many years for which means she became an adult and could should more housework for her most loved ^{family}.

Her sweetest dream was ^{broken} broken by a familiar gentle voice. Eyes opened, and a beautiful box appeared with mother's warm smile: "Happy Birthday! It's your birthday gift, you may like it very much." The moment the box was opened, she felt her dream almost come true: a beautiful yellow stress laid inside and was as beautiful as ^{the one for} her dream. "Oh, mum! I have appreciated it for so long." Yes, this nice dress was once sold in a famous store with a price beyond her payment.

"May I try it on now?" she was so happy. "Sure!" mother said.

Few minutes later, her slim yellow figure climbed downstairs and performed a lovely posture, and saying: "Am I beautiful? father?" A middle-aged man put down his newspaper and looked at her, surprisedly, said: "Much more beautiful than I can expect, honey! Happy Birthday to you!" Alice kissed mother and father then. The cheerfulness was spreading in such a small space.

Suddenly, Alice got something and said: "Where is Amy?" "I guess she is on her way home now" mother responded: "with a surprise for you!" Such a secret tone interested Alice. To think about her angel-like little sister, she had an impulse to give her a warm hug. "I want to see her now." ^{liking} ^{with those} ~~her~~ words, she ~~clumped~~ out, like a flying butterfly.

Then the tragedy occurred without any suggestion: Alice rescued Amy from a full-speeded car and she herself was swallowed by painfulness and darkness. ^{please add more details about this accident.}

The accident was so shocking that the whole family was casted into the bottom of depression. ^{from} By information given by doctor, they were losing Alice! How could it be true? The soul was so flesh this morning, but now it was ^{being tearing} ~~in~~ by the evil.

Mother and Father ^{accompanied / companied} ~~companied~~ Alice the whole night without stopping praying to God for their daughters waking up. Their struggling hope was little by little being cutting into pieces by the passage of time. The Death was coming, but they were helpless.

As if the God responded them with mercy, the right hand of Alice moved slightly. It was so slightly that only the sensitive mother felt. "Oh, John! Her hand moved! Have you got it? Alice? my heart? please, please look at me!"

mother ^{was} almost lost of herself.

smoothly, Allie opened her blue eyes. The whole air suddenly became so quite as if a needle was expected to fall from somewhere! "Where is Amy? is she ok?" her sound was as spiritless as her face. "she's ok, you will be ok ^{also}" father's stumbled words let out his ^{last} ~~conveyer~~ ^{cry}

"sister?" a ^{crying} sound removed Allie's attention to the direction of the door: Amy stood there with a ^{fresh} lily. "Happy Birthday!" she got the words.

A pale smile lit up her face, ^{and} she said to her dearest parents: "I have been late for my adult party, but... now, I'll go with ^{an} angle... compare with me, I... will never... never... lost."

Allie's funeral ^{was} held two days later. On the gravestone there goes an ^{accompanied / company} inscription like this: "Compared by your angle, you will never be lost. In your golden palace, the party never end." In front of the gravestone there laid a branch of fresh lily.

What I Want

"Three passions, simple but overwhelmingly strong, have governed my life: the longing for love, the search for knowledge, and unbearable pity for the suffering of mankind," — Bertrand Russell said.

Besieged with fears, I decided to seek the aid of a psychiatrist. She asked what I want at last, I still couldn't answer what I want after a serious consideration. I was so frustrated and depressed.

When we are in buoyant health, we can't feel the pain of suffering ailment, and death is all but unimaginable. The sick torment is full of my life. I suffered from tracheitis when I was born, appendicitis when I was a pupil, insomnia when I was in middle school, stomach trouble when I was in high school, and now cervical vertebra. I have been used to live with sickness. Especially now, I'm kept under the harrow because of the cervical vertebra. I can't give myself to study.

to do so much with her days and years. Her unusual life and dedicated work had an international influence on the lives of the handicapped. Her success gave others hope. Of course, my lot is far better than Helen. I should do something to be remembered, at least by my generation.

Life ^{is} in a flash, I want the healthy body and healthy mind. On one hand, a healthy mind is in a healthy body. ~~Do any sports~~ ^{I should have} if I like to be healthy. On the other hand, work is the best way to keep a health mind.

The work gives us an appetite for ~~your~~ meals; it ~~leands~~ ^{leaves} solidity to our slumbers, it gives us a perfect and grateful appreciation of a holiday. Tran Hua, a respectable artist, gave a passionate speech which made every actor stand to show their admire, which ~~is~~ ^{was} a acceptance ^{speech} when she was awarded the Hundred Flowers in honour of a lifetime of excellence. Her passion inspired everyone, she has a young heart and a heart to serve her mother country, although she has been 82 years old. The busier you are, the less harm you will be apt to get into, the sweeter will be your sleep, the brighter and happier your holidays, and the better satisfied will the world be with you.

When I'm dying, I could say "This has been my life. I have found it worth living, and would gladly live it again if the chance were offered ^{to} me".

From your composition, I learned that you have bad body, but don't give up, just as you said "Helen Keller could do so much things" why we can't, we are all better than her on healthy. You expressed your feelings in your essay. And gave some examples. That's good,
